An Increase in Impurities This Week

The analysis was made on Sept. 8 and shows an increase over the analysis of the previous week of the presence of nitrites in the city's drinking water. The analysis of sept. 1 showed the amount of nitrites in the water to be .0001, the result being expressed in parts per 100,000. The latest analysis shows the presence of nitrites to be .0003, a slight increase, which indicates the presence of impurity in the Tyroton.
